

HISTORY

MAPP was formed in 1991, when a talented young project manager, Mike Polito, accepted the opportunity to form a commercial construction company in conjunction with owners from one of the largest civil and municipal contracting companies in the nation, Cajun Constructors, Inc.

Armed with solid experience gained through seven years of high-profile construction with three large and progressive general contractors in the Southeast, Mike set out to establish a true alternative to traditional construction companies. He gathered the talents of some of the most experienced veterans in the region, as well as aggressive newcomers who shared his drive and desire for something different. This new MAPP team, encouraged to cultivate individual entrepreneurial spirit, quickly developed its own culture, a strong combination of integrity and professionalism, energized by ingenuity, innovation and an uncommon sense of pride in the purest ideals of building.

MAPP has earned success and recognition by strategically focusing on building relationships with clients, attention to details, and rapid-fire completion of projects, quickly becoming a highly sought after resource in a competitive and demanding market. In 1993, the company's high standards and attentive approach produced a milestone with the awarding of the Catfish Town Renovation in Baton Rouge, an extensive $31 million renovation project. In 1998, our "team approach" to construction produced a second milestone with the awarding of the Expansion to Tiger Stadium. In the year 2000, our success and continued client satisfaction earned MAPP another major milestone with the award of the new SHAW Group Headquarters in Baton Rouge. Since 1991, our continued successes and client satisfaction has fostered un-matched business relationships, generating repeat work for clients such as Southern Theaters, Magnolia Marketing, Home Depot, Target Corporation, Convergys, and Providian Financial.

Amid this exciting period of company growth, our focus remains the same. It has never been our intention to be a competitive general contractor that merely does good work. We want more. We want to be the best and to be recognized as the best. And to set the standard for how construction companies should operate.

Successful projects require the best team you can assemble. We're confident you'll find that team with us.
